

Aviation and Automotive Mechanics

JOB

We're offering you part-time work on some of the most amazing machines on Earth, and you don't have to move or give up your civilian job. You can tackle the avionics of the glass flight deck of the C-17s and the versatile C130Js. Or take on the C-5 Galaxy, a plane so big that its engines weigh 7,900 pounds each.

And, we offer training at no cost. For example, if you want an FAA Air Frame or Power Plant Certificate, you can prep for your oral and written exams through the Community College of the Air Force while earning credits toward your Associate Degree – all at no cost.

If you're into avionics, you can work on the state-of-the-art all glass flight decks, and that experience can be a big benefit in your civilian job. And, if you're into automotive mechanics, how about working on a 60K loader? In addition to a fleet of all kinds of aircraft, the Air Force Reserve maintains an array of vehicles from staff cars to heavy equipment.

The Air Force Reserve is constantly looking for good mechanics and those who want to be.

Benefits

In the Air Force Reserve, you are entitled to a wide range of benefits, similar to those on Active Duty.

- Earn a paycheck – The pay is competitive for part-time and some full-time jobs.
- Get an education – The Air Force Reserve encourages continuing education and offers several programs –
 - Non-contributory Montgomery G.I. Bill, Tuition Assistance, free credits through the Community College of the Air Force (CCAF), and specialized training that can lead to certifications and licenses. There can also be bonuses and incentives for those going into critically needed areas.
- Low-cost health care plan – This new program applies to both the Reservist and immediate family and can significantly reduce the cost of medical care.
- Retirement plan – Military retirement programs are very generous. If you have previously served, your time counts toward your retirement in the Air Force Reserve.
- Commissary and BX Privileges – Military bases offer discounted and tax-free supermarket and department store shopping plus low-cost recreational vehicle rentals.
- Live and serve at home – Serve where you live and transfer to a new location only at your request.
- Maintain rank – If you have previously served in the Air Force or any other branch of the military, chances are you will retain your rank when you join the Air Force Reserve.
- Do the extraordinary – This is an opportunity to meet American heroes accomplishing amazing feats and to become one with them.

The Air Force Reserve is an integral part of the United States Air Force, performing approximately 20 percent of the work. Members of the Air Force Reserve can live and serve in their local communities. Although there are full-time opportunities, those in the Air Force Reserve can continue their full-time civilian careers. This is a great way to serve your country and still live at home with your family.

Qualifications

If you have never served in the military and wish to join the Air Force Reserve, you must:

- Be 17 to 34 years old;
- Be in good health;
- Be of strong character.

AIR FORCE RESERVE

To learn more, call 800-257-1212 or log on to AFReserve.com